Hello everyone. My name is Takuya. I want to tell you about my experience.

Last summer I went to America to study English. I thought it was a good chance to speak English. I studied English at a high school in Texas. Mr.Brown, my homeroom teacher, introduced me to the students in the class. I introduced myself to them, but I couldn't do it well. When the class was over, I was not happy.

On the next day, Mr.Brown asked me a question. I understood his English, but I couldn't say anything. He understood how I felt, so he asked me the question in a different way. I could say only a few words. I wanted to try to speak more English next time.

Some days later, I had a chance to talk with a student from China. His name was Chen. He studied there just like me. He introduced himself in English and said, "My English is not good, but I would like to talk with you." I said, "My English is not good, either, but I'll also try." It was not easy for us to speak English at first, but little by little it became easier. We talked about our family, friends, and schools. We did our best to understand each other. We really enjoyed talking in English and became good friends.

The next day, I met Mr.Brown at school and spoke to him in English. He smiled and said, "You speak English well." I was very happy.
